“Observations were viewed as fundamental to the Droichead process. NQTs found them very beneficial with one NQT citing them as ‘a most amazing opportunity, I will probably never have an opportunity like this again in my career.’”

(DQA 2020)

“ It is recommended that there would be at least two of each type of classroom observation (observations by the NQT, and observations of the NQT’s practice), and that... the classes observed, should be based on discussions between the NQT and the PST . ”

Post-observation Role Play

Teacher: Fiona Subject: Maths Stage 1
Class: Junior Infants

Strand: Shape and Space | Focus of Observation: Questioning Techniques

Fiona introduced the lesson by telling the children they would be learning about four 2D shapes. She began with the circle, displaying a large image of one on the interactive whiteboard. She asked, "This is a circle, isn't it?" and followed with, "Can anyone see something that's a circle in the room?" After two children responded, she moved on.

Children were placed in small groups and given shape packs. Fiona asked each group to take out the circle and feel its edge. With several pupils, including those with EAL, she used simple recall-style questions such as, "Does this shape have corners?" and "Does it feel round to you?" She followed a similar routine for the other shapes.

or other groups, Fiona attempted to extend thinking by asking comparison and reasoning questions like: "How is this shape different from the triangle?", "Why do you think this one is a rectangle and not a square?". Some pupils struggled to respond, while others engaged with support.

She then used magnetic posters to display the four shapes on the board. She explained that the children would take turns coming up to talk about them. However, she remained at the front, asking questions like, "Is this the square?" and "Can you see the triangle?" while pointing herself. Most of the responses came from the whole class in chorus, and no individual children came up to the board.

For the next activity, children worked in groups to sort the four shapes onto A3 mats. Fiona had prepared a variety of materials for this task. As she moved around the room, she interacted with groups by asking questions such as, "Is that a rectangle?" and "Did you put that in the right place?". She occasionally probed further with, "How do you know?". She encouraged them to finish the task and praised completed group work. The final activity—creating pictures using the four shapes—was planned but postponed due to time constraints. Fiona explained that they would complete this the following day.

Your PST members are amazing - make the most out of the support you have and do not be afraid to ask for help! Do as many observations on other teachers as possible, you would be surprised just how much you can learn from them.

Observe other teachers at every given chance as this is the best way to learn...and it will more than likely be one of the last times you will see someone else teaching for you!

Setting Clear Roles and Responsibilities

Oide

The document is titled 'Droichead - PST and NQT Roles and Responsibilities - Primary'. It contains the following sections:

- Droichead

The main objective of the Droichead process is to support the professional learning of NQTs during the induction phase, thus laying the foundations for subsequent professional growth and learning for the next phase of their career.

(Teaching Council, 2017, p. 3)
- Droichead and the PST - Role and Suggested Responsibilities

Supporting an NQT through Droichead is always a collaborative process. The dual role of the PST is to:

 - guide and advise the NQT during school-based induction, in the first stages of their professional journey
 - form a joint declaration with the NQT that they have participated in a quality teaching and learning process.

(Teaching Council 2017)
- PST Suggested Responsibilities

Supporting a NQT during Droichead is always a collaborative process, although the roles and responsibilities of PST members may vary in different school contexts and are therefore agreed before the Droichead process commences.

(Teaching Council, 2017, p. 3)

To guide a PST in its roles, some suggested responsibilities are identified below. The list is neither exhaustive nor prescriptive and is open to customisation by a PST. While responsibilities relating to support and mentoring relate to all team members, a PST may designate some of the other responsibilities to identified individuals within the team.

The PST will share its roles and agreed responsibilities with the NQT at their initial meeting.

The Teaching Council

Fiona has three weeks left in the school and is anxious to complete the Droichead process during this time. Several meetings with the PST have been rescheduled or cancelled during the year for a variety of reasons.

The members of the PST are satisfied that Fiona has engaged in the process, however they feel she has not sufficiently progressed. Therefore, they are not happy to sign the joint declaration. Fiona disagrees as she feels she has completed all required elements of the process.
